

One Apt. Down Summary

In the boisterous city of Miami, Vittoria (Vito) is a young woman with a physical disability trying to lead a “normal” life and experience “normal” events to discover what it means to live and love. It is expected in society that a person with disabilities cannot lead an independent, “normal” life, so she combats the mental trend by living on her own and practicing an uncharted job—fashion therapy. With the help of her four, wacky assistants and their odd experiences, she realizes that life is not defined by normality, but by what one makes of it. From pompous clients, to Cuban witchcraft, and loafing guinea pigs--no matter what comes their way, these five women bring out the best from each other, creating new experiences that defines their “normal” life.

Season One Summary

Vito makes a big choice in her life to live on her own with only her assistants to care for her instead of her parents. With three assistants hired, she takes on a fourth and thus begins a journey with new support and relationships. There is also an introduction of Vito’s ambiguous field of work and the wide range of clients she meets. Lastly, when Vito thinks she finally hired someone who is a little more below the radar of weirdness than her first three assistants, this one continues to surprise her--even scare her--in unexpected ways. Vito’s assistants Martha, Tammara, Shae and Petra all go along on this crazy ride called Vito’s life, while combatting their own inner issues and hurt. Vito finally gets her feet wet, experiencing dating, nightlife, worklife along with everyday’s corks of being handicap. Ultimately they need each other and their friendships keeps them strong.
